It is natural that prosperity should attract friendship or at least the semblance of friendship. The friends of a prosperous man come to him just as the bees come to a rose to suck honey from it. A rich man can realize their necessities by supplying them with money or helping them to obtain lucrative appointments. It is for this reason that a full purse never lacks friends. But when a rich man loses his wealth, or the powerful man is deprived of his power, all the fair-weather friends fade away. Why should they come to him now? They did not love the man himself but his riches, his hospitality and the favours he could confer on them. Only those that are true remain faithful to him. Thus it is that friendship is tried by adversity as gold is tried by fire. [no. of words: 143]
